

WHEREAS, all of the members of this House who have been privileged to serve with Representative Burkhalter respect him for his great abilities, his tireless devotion to the betterment of the State of Georgia, and his many outstanding legislative accomplishments.

PART II

WHEREAS, Willie Lee Duckworth lived with his wife, Edna, in a blue house along Highway 242 as it edges east toward Riddleville and Bartow; and

WHEREAS, every couple of months, a special letter would travel the time-worn path to his door: a royalty check that made him feel like a king; and

WHEREAS, there were years when those checks brought more money than he made hauling pulpwood in Washington County, and the money helped put food on the table and buttons on his shirts; and

WHEREAS, in 1944, Willie Lee Duckworth, an unsuspecting buck private from Georgia, authored one of the most popular marching cadences in U.S. Army history; and

WHEREAS, at first, it simply was known as the "Duckworth Chant" but it later gained fame as "Sound Off":

Ain't no use in goin' home.

Jody's got your gal and gone.

Ain't no use in feelin' blue.

Jody's got your sister, too.

Sound off!

One, two.

Sound off!

Three, four....

With those words, and others, Duckworth made the journey from foot soldier to footnote in military history; and

WHEREAS, "Sound Off" became the title of a song performed by big band leader Vaughn Monroe, and this year marks the 58th anniversary of the movie by the same name, starring Mickey Rooney; and

50 WHEREAS, although many folks in Washington County are aware of his contribution, the 51 march of time has delivered a generation of others who know little or nothing about his 52 serendipitous fame; and

53 WHEREAS, he was raised by his grandparents in a sharecropper's house not far from where 54 he lived, and when he was drafted during World War II it was the first time he had been more 55 than 100 miles from home; and

56 WHEREAS, on orders from a noncommissioned officer, he improvised his own drill for the 57 nine African American soldiers in his unit, and soon all the ranks were buzzing and keeping 58 rhythm; and

59 WHEREAS, "Sound Off" is still making noise with the blessings of the young soldier who 60 dreamed it up, and it is only fitting and proper that this marching maestro be honored by the 61 people of Georgia.

62 PART III

63 WHEREAS, Walter Curtis Butler, Jr., was born on December 12, 1943, in Morgan County,

66 Pearl High School, and he resided in Morgan County his entire life and was the first African 67 American elected official in Morgan County; and

68 WHEREAS, he served as a Morgan County Commissioner for over 25 years and served as 69 vice chair for many years; and

70 WHEREAS, Walter Curtis Butler, Jr., was a member of the NAACP for over 40 years, was 71 the founder of the Morgan County Branch of the NAACP, served as president of the Georgia 72 State Conference of the NAACP for 12 years, and was a Golden Heritage Life member of 73 the national association; and

74 WHEREAS, he was, despite his most humble and unassuming manner, a widely-known and 75 highly-respected Civil Rights pioneer and leader not just in Madison, Morgan County, and 76 throughout the State of Georgia, but also in the states contiguous to Georgia; and

77 WHEREAS, Walter Curtis Butler, Jr., in his many years of service as a leader in the NAACP
78 and as a Morgan County Commissioner, was a member of and garnered numerous accolades
79 from various civic and public organizations including the Georgia Association of Black
80 Elected Officials; Association County Commissioners of Georgia (ACCG); State
81 Commission on Martin Luther King, Jr., Holiday; Criminal Justice Coordinator Council
82 (2002-2006), where he served as Governor Roy Barnes' appointee; Morgan County Hospital 83 Authority; and the Morgan County Civil League, just to name a few; and

84 WHEREAS, it is only fitting and proper to dedicate a bridge as a lasting memorial to his 85 accomplishments.
